SATURDAY MORNING, APRIL 9, 1859. NEW ANECDOTE BY THE "OPIUM EATER." [From De Quincey's new Lollum . "The Avenger."

just published by Treknor & Fields.] The little Carnaryonshire child in "We are Seven," who is represented as repelling the idea of death under an absolute inability to receive it, had completed her eighth year .-But this might be an ambitious exaggera-tion, such as aspiring female children are generally disposed to practice. It is more probable that she might be in the currency of her eighth year. Naturally we must not exact from Wordsworth any pedantic rigor of four. In that case the following anecdote seems to impeach the philosophic truth of this doctrine. I give the memorandum as it was drawn up by myself at the time:
My second child, but eldest daughter, little M-, is between two and three weeks less than two years old; and from the day of her birth she has been uniformly attended by Barbara Lewthwaite. We are now in the first days of June; but about three weeks since, consequently in the earlier half of May, some one of our neighbors gave to Ma little bird. I am no great ornithologist .-"Perhaps only a tenth-rate one," says some too flattering reader. O dear, no, nothing near it; I fear, no more than a five hundred and tenth rater. Consequently, I cannot ornithologically describe or classify the bird. But I believe that it belonged to the family of finches-either a goldfinch, bullfinch, or at least something ending in inch. The present was less splendid than at first it seemed. For the bird was wounded; though not in a way that made the wound apparent; and too sensibly, as the evening wore away. it drooped. None of us knew what medical treatment to suggest; and all that occurred was to place it with free access to bird seed and water. At length sunset arrived, which was the signal for M----'s departure to bed. She came, therefore, as usual, to me, threw her arms round my neck, and went through her ordinary routine of prayers; namely, first the Lord's Prayer, and finally the four following lines, (a Roman Catholic bequest to the children of Northern England:)

"Holy Jesus, meek and mild, Look on me, a little child; Pity my simplicity; Grant that I may come to thee."

-, as she was moving off to bed, whispered to me that I was to "meud" the bird with "voddonum." Having always seen me taking laudanum, and for the purpose (as she was told) of growing better in health, reasonably it struck her that the little bird would improve under the same regimen. For her satisfaction, I placed a little diluted laudanum near to the bird; and she then departed to bed, though with uneasy looks reverting to her sick little pet. Occupied with some point of study, it happened that I sat up through the whole night, and long before seven o'clock in the morning she had summoned Barbara to dress her, and soon I heard the impatient little foot descending the stairs to my study. I had such a Jesuistical bulletin ready by way of a report upon the bird's health, as might not seem absolutely despairing, though not too dangerously sanguine. And as the morning was one of heavenly splendor, I proposed that we should improve the bird' chances by taking it our-of-doors into the lit-tle orchard at the foot of, Fairfield—our loftiest Grasmere mountain. Thither moved at once Barbara Lewthwaite, little M——, myself and the poor languishing bird. By that time Suddenly, as we all stood around the little perch on which the bird rested, one thrilling song, louder than the rest, arose from a neighboring hedge. Immediately the bird's eye, previously dull, kindled into momentary fire; the bird rose on its perch, struggled for an instant, seemed to be expanding itswings, made one aspiring movement upwards, in doing so fell back, and in another moment was dead. Too certainly and apprrently all these transitions symbolically interpreted themselves, and to all of us alike; the proof of which was-that man, woman and child spontaneously shed tears; a weakness, perhaps, but more natural under the regular processional evolution of the scenical stages, than when simply read as a narrative, for too evident it was to one and all of us, without needing to communicate by words, what vision had revealed itself to all alike-to the child under two years old, not less than to the adults; too evident it was, that, on this magnificent May mornining, there had been exhibited, as on the stage of a theatre-there had passed before the eyes of us all-passed, and was finished-the everlasting mystery of death! It seemed to me that little M-, by her sudden burst of tears, must have read this saddest of truths—must have felt that the bird's fate was sealed, not less clearly than Barbara 60 per cent. RED PEPPER FOR PUNCH .- The Scientific American recommends as a substitute for hot whiskey punch of a cold night, the following: "Put three or four lumps of sugar, with half a teaspoonful of cayenne pepper, in a tumbler, and fill up with hot water; when the sugar is dissolved, drink. It is not only pleasant to the palate, but warms the whole body more effectually and quicker than spirits."

MAYOR'S OFFICE, April 6, 1859.—An election for four Overseers of the Poor, (one from each Ward,) will be held at the Council Chamber, on Monday, the 11th inst., under the direction of the following Commissioners: Joseph Stansbury, Thomas McCormick, and A. D. Wardle Chamber, and A. D. Wardle Chamber, and D. Wardle Chambe field. The said election to be held between the hours of ten in the morning, and five in the even-ing.

W. D. MASSEY, Mayor.

TRUSTEES OF THE POOR NOTICE -Those parties to whom the Board are indebted supplies furnished the City Poor and Alms House, are requested to send their accounts made up to the first of April, to the andersigned, on or before the 12th instant, (Monday next.) if they wish any benefit from the appropriation to be applied for at the next meeting of the City Council.

Analysis by Dr. R. H. Stabler. Soluble Phosphate of Lime Sulphurie Acid..... Organic Matter..... SOMBRERO GUANO.

IN calling the attention of the public to this val-uable and recently discovered deposit of this fertilizing article, we will merely state, that like all other phosphatic GUANOS, its most valuable constituent is phosphoric acid, or bone phosphate of lime; and that its mercantile value, as compared with other GUANOS of its kind, may be easily determined by the amount of phosphoric acid or bone phosphate of lime it contains. In order, therefore, to give the public a thorough knowledge of what SOMBRERO GUANO does contain, we beg to refer to the following list of eminent chemists in different parts of the world, who have analyzed different cargoes, from average samples taken by themselves from the cargoes just as they arrive from the island, without drying er selection of specimens for analyzation. Each analysis will be exhibited, if required, under the original signature of each chemist named: Of phosphoric acid, estimated as equivalent to phosphate of lime, it is found to contain-
